Program Objectives

In conjunction with West Virginia State Medical Association’s Annual Meeting, a urology workshop has been planned to meet the needs of regional physicians that practice urologic surgery. This workshop will provide an update of various new developments in clinical urology and the effects of health care billing and coding on the health care system. All lectures will be presented by regional experts in their fields and will be supplemented with discussions and opportunities for audience participation. This program is planned for physicians that practice in the specialty of urology and for internal medicine, family medicine, emergency medicine and other interested physicians. By attending this workshop, the participant will be able to:

- Review new developments in urologic surgery
- Increase knowledge to facilitate management of urologic clinical problems
- Discuss the impact of ICD-10 in the practice of medicine
- Discuss current technologies and applications to assist the urology practice
